TRUSTEE DETAILS

The trustee has legal ownership of the assets of the trust. Where a trust is being used as an asset protection vehicle it is important that the trustee is separate to the beneficiaries so that there can be no confusion that the trustees own the assets for their own benefit. There is a principal at common law that a person can not hold assets for themselves therefore a sole individual trustee can not also be the sole individual specified beneficiary. Where a trustee is ONLY acting as trustee of the trust there is no requirement to register the trustee for an ABN or tax file number. You only need to register the trust.

BENEFICIARIES

The beneficiaries are divided into income and capital beneficiaries. Capital beneficiaries are entitled to the capital of the trust upon vesting. Where the profit of the trust is distributed each year then the capital will usually only be the settled sum. The capital beneficiaries are described as "the children of" the default beneficiaries as this provides further asset separation from the trustees (or directors of the trustee) where those people are the parents.

Our standard general beneficiary clause includes relatives and related entities of the default beneficiaries.

Excluded Beneficiaries are not allowed to receive a distribution. This includes the Settlor. If you wish to exclude other people (such as an ex spouse) then they should be named here.
